

Boarding Release

We recommend that animals be kept separately while boarding at our facility. Normally friendly and tolerant animals may become hostile towards each other when confined in the same cage or kennel. This may lead to one animal being denied access to food or water by the other pets, or may result in a serious fight with injuries to one or both pets. In addition, we can better monitor your pets health during their stay with us.

I, _____ have read and understand the above and would nevertheless request that my animals:

_____ & _____, be kept in the same cage or kennel. Brook-Ellis is not responsible for any harm or medical expenses arising from the situation. I am completely financially responsible for and authorize any treatment of injuries or illness resulting from my animals being kept together.
